“ Diane Godlewski was my Spanish teacher for three years between 1995-1999. She was my favorite teacher, always honest and transparent with her students and often hilarious. Her jokes were a combination of brutal honesty and sarcasm that you either loved or hated, understood or completely missed. I loved it. She once told me “you’ll never get a job with that weak hand shake” lol. I’ve had a firm hand shake ever since. She was also caring and thoughtful. I remember she shared a photo album with me from her time in Salamanca when I told her I’d be spending the summer there studying Spanish between junior and senior year. She purposely left out a lot of images, so as not to ruin the surprise of my trip. When I graduated she gave me the strongest hug ever. I knew I was one of her favorites too. 1.5 years after graduation, my mom got breast cancer and she emailed me to see how I was doing after she learned about this from my friend. Behind that tough and funny teacher exterior was a kind heart. RIP Ms. Godlewski (known to some as Mrs. Ferritto).
