“ It’s been a painful 4 days since my Uncle Joe passed away, and nothing seems to ease the pain, the empty feeling inside my heart. I only find some relief reflecting on the lifetime of memories I have of him. Some make me laugh some make me smile and some make me sad. But al make me wish I had one more day, one more phone call, one more trip to the nurseries, one more shared ham and Swiss hero in the truck, one more masonry job, one more islander game on tv, one more walk through the mall. I’ve got a life times worth and 4 days later I’m still thinking of mew ones. I realized more than ever how special he was, how like a father he was to me, all the things he passed on to me, his kindness, his generosity, all of wisdom, his never give up mentality. It is all so ever clear to me now, I get you, Uncle Joe I got It. I can’t help thinking what I would say if I had one more minute with him, I would. tell him, how great full I am, how proud of him i am, how forever thankful I am, and most importantly, how much I love & how much I am going to miss him. I promise you Uncle Joe I am going to live my life by all the things you stood for. I will never forget all that you are. You will always be alive in a lifetime of cherished memories, that I am forever great full to have. I love you Uncle Joe I love you with all my heart.
