“ Our son was struggling with math when "Mrs. Gillen" came into our lives. From the very first day of her class we knew he was in the care of a master teacher. Mrs. Gillen always gave just exactly the right amount of homework to foster learning, and cared enough to let us know when some extra review was needed.

She was kind and friendly while at the same time a no-nonsense teacher who had full--and we mean FULL--control of her classroom. She told us that she had a degree in psychology and that, incredibly, math had not been her strongest subject in school. She explained that she had decided to become a math teacher because, math having not been her strong suit, she knew where the pitfalls were. Also, she believed her degree in psychology would be useful teaching students for whom math was not their strongest subject.

Although after graduation she invited us to call her Maureen, we always refer to her as "Mrs. Gillen"; for teachers it's sort of a title, and our respect for her has always been such that we naturally gave her this honor, this title--"Mrs. Gillen"--when speaking of her.

We are so grateful for her tremendous dedication, for the gifts she shared and for the confidence she engendered in our son. She truly changed our lives and we are sure, the lives of many others. We are so very sorry her last years were so difficult and have been keeping her in our prayers and will continue to keep her and all of you in our prayers.

With sincere condolences,

Marilyn, Steve and Anthony Scattoreggio
