“ Remembering visits from you and Aunt Diana after you all got off work to Mom and I, you three grown ups talked long after I went to bed. I'd listen until I fell asleep; one time I heard you say something that made me look forward to turning 30 from that night on. What a blessing that turned out to be!

I remember your first trip to Hawaii; you came back with wonderful stories (and a jewelry box for me with a ballerina inside, it's on my bureau still). And pictures! Slide shows! Later, so many trips all over the world with wonderful pictures and stories, the underserved market in the Far East, for example.

I remember your first apartment, and when you two bought your home, Mom and I came over to visit and you shared about the renovations you planned to make; when you bought a Cadillac and how you talked about the fins. Those fins.

I remember your origami (the frog is still my favorite) and that map of the Untied States that hung on the wall that you made of paper clips you'd straightened out, re-formed, and welded together.

Remember how Mom and I came over to hear the first stereo record where you'd hear the train coming from one side of the room and leaving from the other side of the room?

My first Bible was from you two, for my baptism at St. John's; I really appreciate the large print of that family heirloom these days, it's been with me everywhere I've moved. Thank you, Godfather.

When the attic fan stopped working, I asked you if you'd put a new one in if I got it, you wanted to look at it first, before I spent any money, and lo and behold, you removed the motor, took it apart and put it back together and it still works just fine these 18 years later.

Was there anything you couldn't fix? Uncle Warren, "reduce, reuse, recycle" is nothing new to us.

For all the love, the being there, the lessons you taught me (by example!), the happy memories you gave me, my mom, and all of us, I miss you with skin on. You are always in my heart. Love from your (prodigal) Goddaughter, Jane Victoria

“ Warren and Diana devoted countless hours volunteering for Last Hope Animal Rescue and, in particular, at the PetSmart Huntington Cat Adoption Center location. Diana trained me as a new volunteer over 15 years ago, and I remember how Warren had devised a cat litter sifting box that was invaluable! My memory of Warren will always be as an extremely cheerful person who seemingly, would drop everything when supplies were running low at the center, to deliver them promptly. It was my genuine pleasure and great honor to have known such a wonderful human being.

“ There is one particular "snapshot" I have in my mind each time the name Warren Valentine comes to mind....he Greater NY Orchid Society show in the World Financial Center, it's early morning, many of us had arrived at about 5:30 or 6 am, and Warren is standing in the middle of his handiwork (about a dozen raised beds being prepared for orchid deliveries from local orchid societies and clubs), he's got his work belt cinched tight, and he's smiling broadly, considering the best way to attach the lumber and plan the workday.

I must have looked up at him just at that moment, because at any other time he was bent over hammering, nailing, spreading turf or woodchips - NOT standing still - always smiling.

Will miss Warren every time I go to an orchid show.

Never one to miss any effort to help the community - I'm attaching a photo of Warren and Diana, helping to remove non-native plants from a valuable protected plant and animal site - after having driven out to southern Staten Island...wish I had the actual photo of Warren standing in the middle of the World Financial Center, but that remains etched in my heart and mind, not in a photograph.

Best wishes Diana and Leslie, Warren was truly one of a kind.
